About CAFLL

In 2009, the First Chinese & American Forum on Legal Information and Law Libraries (CAFLL) was held in Beijing. The conference was classified as one of the important events commemorating the 30th anniversary of establishment of diplomatic relations between China and the United States, and it became a high level forum between the Law Schools and legal libraries. It reached a Xiangshan Declaration at the first conference — CAFLL would establish the consultative committee and executive committee in China & U.S. as the permanent project, and it would be held every two years by this two countries in turn. The second conference was held in Philadelphia, 2011. The third conference will be held by East China University of Political Science and Law (ECUPL) in Shanghai, China.

In the United States, Chinese and American Forum on Legal Information and Law Libraries (CAFLL) is a non-profit organization incorporated in the State of Pennsylvania on February 1, 2010. It was granted the Federal income tax exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code as of February 1, 2010. In China, it was supported by the Higher Legal Education Steering Committee of the Chinese Ministry of Education and China Association for Legal Education. It was also sparkplugged by China University of Political Science and Law (CUPL) and daily administrated by the Network of China Law School Libraries.

The Chinese and American Forum on Legal Information and Law Libraries (CAFLL) promotes the accessibility of legal information and the education of legal information professionals in the United States and China. It aims at giving full play to the core role of the professional law librarians in the collection, organization and access of legal information.

At conferences in 2009 & 2011, representatives from both sides had in-depth discussions on many themes: law policy-making process and legal information system in China and the United States; the development, application, service and challenge of legal information resources in Chinese and American Law School libraries; the education, training, exchange and cooperation of Legal information professionals; the library leaders’ status; librarian training; access to legal information; the internationalization of legal research; legal search and empirical research; modern technology’s influence on legal library; law and government information retrieval in China and the United States and so on. This Conference in Shanghai is about Collaboration, Information, Access, Partnership.

Children who were born into and raised in the digital world are coming of age, and soon our world will be reshaped in their image. 21世纪法律图书馆的新机遇

S. Blair Kauffman 耶鲁大学法律图书馆

数字时代为法学院图书馆提供了机遇，导致图书馆的馆藏建设发生重大变化——这种变化更多是基于用户研究需求的拓展。与以印刷型文献为主的传统图书馆相比，这类图书馆更具活力，更能引人注目，它的工作人员具有高技能，并在智力生活中发挥更重要作用。用户对数字化法律信息喜好的转变和增长，不仅拓展了图书馆提供信息的渠道，也使用户的法学研究过程日趋复杂化。这就要求图书馆根据用户需求调整馆藏资源的配置。关键的转变是：原先是提供印刷文献的服务，现在要拓展服务领域，并重新配置人员。这种变化给图书馆带来新课题，更好地解决数字化资源使用的许可、跟踪和发现等问题；拓展培训研究技能的服务内容；开发并维护数据库和资料库，并且为相关研究和学术项目提供支持。

这个发言主要展示了21世纪法律图书馆提供服务的发展趋势，侧重于过去十年中，大多数美国法律图书馆的服务和发计划。

New Opportunities for 21st Century Law Libraries

S. Blair Kauffman, Yale University Law Library

The digital age creates an opportunity for law school libraries to radically change their collecting practices and focus more directly on supporting the expanding research needs of their users. These libraries are more interesting and lively than their print bound ancestors, command a workforce with a higher skill set and play a more vital role in the intellectual life of their institutions. The increased availability of, and shift in, user preferences for digitized legal information both expands the information reach of libraries and complicates the legal research process for users. It requires libraries to reallocate resources in alignment with the needs of their users. The key change is to reallocate personnel from print-based functions to allow libraries to expand services into new areas of need. This change enables libraries to better address issues ranging from licensing, tracking and making digital resources discoverable to developing new programs for teaching research skills, developing and preserving digital databases and repositories and otherwise supporting the research and scholarship programs of their institutions.

This presentation scans the evolving services being offered by 21st law libraries, focusing on programs and services developed within the past decade at major U.S. law libraries.
The intersection and integration of information and law: a kind of Interdisciplinary Studies

Zhou Qingshan Department of Information Management, Peking University

The intersection of information and law creates two research-- law Informatics and Information Law. In this session, presenters will share with the audience how Concordia University George R. White Law Library and Peking University School of Transnational Law Library are being built from scratch, including physical space planning, collection development, subscription negotiation, system configuration, reference, and instructional services. Information Service to the Public: the Experience of a County Law Library in the U.S.

Frank Liu, Duquesne University Law Library

There are more than 300 county, county-court libraries in the United States that play an important role in providing legal information to the legal community of the jurisdiction it resides in: federal, state, and local judiciary as well as local bar including lawyers from sole practitioners to the largest law firms in the country, government officials at all levels, and the general public. County law libraries are administered under the county government, county courts, bar associations, or independent agencies. Funding for the libraries come from a variety of sources as well: county government, part of a court’s budget, filing fees, circulation fees, and additional fees from services provided like document delivery, sale of publications and used books, etc. Libraries attempt to provide both print materials and online services that are moving more towards electronic libraries. Law libraries need to address new and changing developments in both technical and public services. In my presentation I will discuss these various aspects of library administration, funding, and services provided and describe the private university/college-public law library partnership between Duquesne University and Allegheny County, Pennsylvania to manage the Allegheny County Law Library.
An Analysis of Domestic Politics and Law University Library Social Service Situation

Duan Yufeng  East China Normal University

This paper reorganizes the current social services in academic libraries of Political Science and Law by investigating the three libraries of East China University of Political Science and Law, Southwest University of Political Science and Law and Zhongnan University of Economics and Law. On this basis, the paper summarizes the shortages and analyses the main influencing factors. By drawing on the experience of the innovative services implemented by other academic libraries and public libraries, from four aspects of library service space, resources, person and mechanism, the paper proposes the detailed suggestions on how to promote the social services competence in academic libraries of Political Science and Law in China.
This article discusses the current public access to information resources model in the U.S. and Britain. Based on the different types of information resources, including government, publicly-funded research and scientific data, this article compares Chinese policies and institutional practices within the legal system, the methods of implementation, and accessibility. It then offers some suggestions and ideas.

In conclusion, this article suggests the following: (1) based on legislation, China shall adhere to localization, coordination, and international compatibility for access to public and governmental information resources; (2) in order to implement access to these information resources, first China can establish a depository system with Chinese characteristics, including digital information; second, China can learn from the “Creative Commons” model and build bridges among information resource creators, disseminators and users so that it can promote the sharing of information and so that it can protect citizens’ rights to information; (3) China shall learn from the “Government Information Locater Service” to promote the information industry and the construction of government information so that the government information resources can be further described and search mechanisms can be built; (4) citizens shall be encouraged to actively participate in accessing information resources in through institutional arrangements in order to eliminate the widespread problem of information dissemination and leased information and to reduce the costs of accessing information.

一位法律信息专家在大学领导力中的角色

Matt Cordon 贝勒大学

法律图书馆员和其他法律信息专家通常只关注在图书馆的大墙之内提供的日常服务，以及为图书馆读者提供的常规服务。这样，专家们很少有时间可用于在其他机构，如法学院或大学中担任领导或其他职责。然而，一个法律信息专家拥有能力在法学院中大有作为，而且担任领导职位可以促进其个人发展和图书馆的声誉。这样的领导职位包括：学校教授委员会、校务委员会、院务委员会、负责与学校其他部门合作的等职位。此外，本讲座还将探讨与上述领导职位相关的学术和教学的重要性。

A Legal Information Professional’s Role in University Leadership

Matt Cordon, Baylor University Law School
Law librarians and other legal information professionals often focus their attention on day-to-day management within the walls of the library as well as the many varieties of services offered to library patrons. This may leave little time for the professional to assume leadership responsibilities in other contexts, including positions within a law school or university. However, a legal information professional may have a skill set that could be highly beneficial to the institution as a whole, and the professional can enhance his or her development as well as the reputation of the library by accepting leadership roles. Examples of such roles discussed in this lecture will include: positions on a university or faculty senate; positions on university committees; positions on law school committees; positions that involve collaborative efforts from different university departments. In addition, this lecture will address the significance of scholarship and teaching within the same context as the leadership positions.

公众信息服务：美国乡村——社区基础信息服务
杜云飞 Herman L. Totten，北德克萨斯大学

如今，乡村图书馆和信息服务有许多难题。据 2010 年美国人口普查统计，美国 84%的国土及附属岛屿属于乡村，居住着占总人口 20%的居民。同时，乡村图书馆员缺乏专业训练。过去，社区延伸是指在图书馆之外提供同等的图书馆服务。近年来，社区延伸在以下方面更为活跃：图书馆门外的连接、传递、伙伴、协同、融合、参与和培训。更重要的是，在图书馆门外建立起伙伴关系的信任关系。图书馆增强社区服务的一种方式是与其他组织，如法院、县政府、法学院图书馆协同规划社区延伸项目的基础建设。

北德克萨斯大学信息学院的两位教授获得了鲁比普里迪慈善信托基金（160 万美元）和 IMLS（图书馆协会）劳拉·布什 21 世纪基金（100 万美元）的资助，用以培训服务于德克萨斯乡村和太平洋附属岛屿的下一代图书馆员，为各种不同群体提供各种信息资源。本次演讲将分析乡村推广计划参与者的成功案例，解释如何利用技术手段培训图书馆员。该项目可能有助于中美教育机构之间建立起合作关系。

Rural Community-Centered Information Services and Training: Experiences from Rural Libraries in Texas and the Pacific Islands

Du Yunfei, University of North Texas College of Information
Herman L. Totten, University of North Texas College of Information

Various challenges exist in rural library and information services today. According to the US Census 2010 data, eighty-four percent of land in the United States and the affiliated islands are rural with twenty percent of the total population living in rural areas. However, there is a shortage of professionally trained rural librarians. Traditionally, community outreach refers to equitable library services that are offered outside the walls of the library building. In recent years, community outreach means an activity that connecting, delivering, partnering, collaborating, teaming up, joining forces, fostering engagement outside of library entities. Most importantly, it involves a process of building trust and partnerships with those outside the library. One way of gaining more community support is for libraries to design and implement community outreach programs that partner with outside organizations such as court, county, and law school libraries.

Two professors from the University of North Texas, College of Information received funding from the Robert and Ruby Priddy Charitable Trust ($1.6 million dollars) and the IMLS Laura Bush 21st Century –Fund ($1 million) to train the next generation of librarians serving rural areas in Texas and the U. S. Affiliated Pacific Islands focusing on serving various populations in a community, rather than on the format of information sources. The presentation will analyze successful cases that were completed by participants from the rural library initiative project and address how technologies can be used to train librarians in practice. This program will potentially be helpful to build collaborations between Chinese and U.S. educational institutions.

时间就是一切：律师的信息寻求行为

Renate Chancellor  美国天主教大学

法律信息的获取对于律师如何开展工作起着至关重要的作用。以信息检索模型作为理论的视角来分析用户行为已经在学术文献中有过透彻的研究。然而，很少有研究关注法律从业人员的信息搜索行为。进而，这些模式并未考虑在一定时限内获取信息的需求。本演讲展示了关于律师搜索信息行为的研究成果，并介绍了一个正在开发的模型(Chancellor, 2011)。调查显示，法律从业人士在进行法律信息搜索时有独特的需求。此结果可以为帮助法律图书馆员和信息专家了解美国乃至全球的法律从业人士如何获取法律信息。

Timing Is Everything: Information-Seeking Behavior of Lawyers

Renate Chancellor, Catholic University of America School of Information

The acquisition of legal information is critical to how lawyers conduct their work. The use of information-seeking models as a theoretical lens to analyze user behavior has been exhausted in the scholarly literature. However, few studies examine the information seeking behavior of legal professionals. Furthermore, these models do not consider the demands of accessing legal information in a time-constrained environment. This presentation reports the results of a study on the information seeking behavioral patterns of lawyers. It further explores a model in development (Chancellor, 2011). Findings suggest that law practitioners have unique information seeking needs when searching for legal information. Results from this research will aid law librarians and information professionals in understanding how legal practitioners in the United States and globally access and obtain legal information.

Building the Strength of our Institutions through Collaboration, Intellectual Exchange, and Shared Vision

Wan Meng, Dean, Beijing Foreign Studies University Law School, China

Wang Chang, Thomson Reuters and China University of Political Science and Law

Over the past 20 years, law schools in China, the United States, and Europe have experienced dramatic changes in their substantive law curriculums, skills training programs, and the scholarly agendas of their students and faculty. Simultaneously, the challenges and opportunities for legal education, domestically and globally, are changing dramatically due to technology, increased competition, and evolutions in legal practice. This program will provide an overview of the current landscape of legal education in China, the United States, and Switzerland, as well as a discussion of the expanding role legal information providers are providing in delivering services and content to faculty, students, and members of the legal profession. There will be a particular focus on curricular innovations that are taking place in law schools in China, the United States, and Switzerland, and how these innovations may set the stage for mutually beneficial relationships between law schools and law libraries in these countries.
In recent years, as a result of the rapid advancement of legal education, legal research, and legal practice, law libraries have entered their golden period of development in China. The Law libraries have been transformed by the increasingly powerful functions of information storage, organization, processing and transmission, which has improved the environment for law students, researchers, and legal practice. Focusing on the law school libraries, this article collects and analyzes law library website data according specific criteria. It will describe and assess their operations, services, unique features as well as their challenges so as to take a scientific approach to providing researchers with an overview of the Chinese law library. The article thesis covers four aspects: the purpose and values of this special survey; the conceptual design of the survey and the scope, methods and standards involved in the investigation; a detailed account of areas covered, literature resources, personnel, office expenses and website construction, etc; a general assessment and objective evaluation of further development, infrastructure and resources, essential services, and cooperation and sharing.
Co-Development of the Law Library Resources Sharing Model in China

Ouyang Chenhong, Library of University of Political Science and Law

In the first chapter, this article introduces the mission of Law School Library Association's co-development of a cooperative model over last three decades, including publishing annual reports/briefs and union cataloging; coordinating purchase of foreign publications; editing the association's journal; editing the textbook The Search and Use of Legal Documents; and building foreign e-books.

After that, this article introduces the similarities and differences in collections and services among Chinese law libraries. It identifies several methods to co-develop Chinese law library sharing models: (1) unifying the library catalog retrieval system; (2) building specialized resources through university academic databases, coordinating foreign publications and digital resources, digitizing rare books; (3) providing interlibrary loan and document delivery service; (4) combining reference service with document delivery service; (5) establishing a standing committee for cooperative institutions.

Finally, this article raises some issues about collaboration and sharing that can be resolved by creating a shared sharing platform, investing in funds and manpower to comply with copyright regulations, and publicizing them to users.
Innovative Law Library Service to the Faculty and Students

Adeen Postar, American University Law School Law Library

Library services to faculty and students at U.S. law schools are undergoing a profound change. No longer are law libraries passive partners in legal education and warehouses for books. Innovative library services include embedding librarians in clinics and programs, support for empirical research, and “co-teaching” collaboration, where librarians pair with faculty to train students and research assistants in advanced research techniques. Other new services include research and collection support for law school offices, such as Career Services, Admissions and even Facilities. Besides conventional reference services for students, many libraries engage in asynchronous research assistance, including email and chat, as well as providing digital guides to help students and faculty do their own research on their own time. Collection and circulation services libraries have traditionally provided are being extended far beyond the book check out, to include the circulation of laptops, power cords, seat cushions and book rests – and even dogs as a stress reliever during finals. Collections are increasingly being driven by patron requests – and mostly in digital formats. This talk will explore the many new services law libraries are providing and show how these services are vital to assisting 21st century law faculty and law students.
Comparative Study of Judicial Information Publishing and Dissemination in China and the U.S.

Luo Wei, Washington University Law School, St. Louis

Yu Liying, Tsinghua University Law School

In the United States, the government is very open about not only its legislative and executive information but also judicial information. The right of public access to the information of the executive branch of the US federal government is guaranteed by the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) while the same right to access judicial information derives from two independent sources: common law and the First Amendment. Public access to judicial information helps safeguard the integrity, quality, and respect in this country's judicial system, and permits the public to keep a watchful eye on the workings of the court system. The judicial information in which people are most interested are judicial records filed in courts, including opinions, orders, petitions, answers, subpoenas, motion, briefs, discovery materials, verdict forms, jury instructions, etc. Since the United States is a common law country, court opinions have been well organized and published by the federal or state governments as well as legal publishers such as West and LexisNexis. In 1988, PACER (Public Access to Court Electronic Records) was established for the United States federal court documents. It allows litigation parties to file court documents with PACER and litigation parties and public users to obtain case and docket information. Today, most of the state courts also have the similar online system. China may learn from the American experience to establish its own similar online system to facilitate court document filing, research, and retrieval, so as to improve judicial justice and dignity.

Comparative Analysis of Four Service Technologies in China’s Mobile Libraries

Jiang Bo, Library of Southwest University of Political Science and Law

The development of mobile internet technologies has brought new opportunities and dramatic changes for library service and led to the construction of the mobile library. SMS, MMS, Web Sites and Apps (client applications) are different technologies for delivering mobile library services which involve the outward interface of the mobile library system architecture. These four technologies use completely different and clearly distinctive techniques. SMS has the highest coverage and low demand on computer equipment and networks; MMS helps users receive a high capacity information. But both fall short in terms of diversity and interoperability of their services.
Web Site and App service technologies are diverse, but have high demands on computer equipment and networks, so their coverage is low. SMS, MMS, Web Sites and App technologies all have their own strengths. In terms of mobile library services, it is hard to say which is better.
When we design and build the mobile library, we need clearly understand the characteristics of these different service technologies, how they integrate and complement each other, and select the most appropriate to build our own library and to give users a better service.
Subject Research Services in the Law Library

Gao Lihong  Library of Zhongnan University of Economics and Law

The academic law library plays an important role in developing the discipline of law. Current legal research is increasingly interdisciplinary in nature, creating closer and closer linkages with other subject areas. Law as a discipline is open and practical and this results in a wide variety of legal literature resources and publishing patterns according to Lotka's principle. Traditional reference subject services tends to be static and passive and cannot meet the needs of the law discipline's ongoing construction and development in the internet age. Therefore, we must transform the model of subject service from "people and service" to "function and service", and change the mode of subject research service from literature service to knowledge service. This paper argues that it is necessary to transform the law library's subject research services and organize information services to not only meet the needs of subject specific research, but also to focus on models of knowledge services. Based on the literature and legal information subject and knowledge service models, the law library must become an integral part of subject research in order to support institutional instruction and research. Thus, we can establish different subject services based on user need, implement subject information services of open access in view of resources, set up data curation and sharing of scientific research, and embed teaching assistant service in classrooms.

William & Mary

Institutional Repositories are becoming increasingly popular worldwide, with more than 35 American law schools implementing them. The William & Mary Law School Scholarship Repository, running on Bepress' Digital Commons platform, began in 2010 to promote and preserve the intellectual output of the William & Mary Law School in an open access environment. Collections of the school's law reviews and faculty scholarship were created and quickly populated, but the library did not stop there. The digital archive's collections now include newspapers, reports, brochures, photos, and videos that bring the history of the law school to anyone's fingertips. These documents are being accessed worldwide with regularity: less than two years after the first article was added to the repository, the Scholarship Repository at William & Mary became the first at an American law school to break 1,000,000 downloads. With more than 7,900 items, the global impact of the repository continues to expand as close to 90% of the countries in the world have visited the site.

法律社交网络信息服务初探——从法律场域中的角色规则及制度语境下的行为逻辑切入
何远琼、郭叶 北京大学法制信息中心

在细分社交网络可能成为即时社交网络媒体时代主流的当下，市场对法律垂直社交网络信息服务跃跃欲试。在“全面推进依法治国”成为推进政治建设和政治体制改革的重要任务的形势下，法律社交网络信息服务被赋予积极的社会功能，也是专业型服务行业垂直社交网络发展潮流中的热门。然而，法律信息服务行业是否真的适合向垂直社交网络信息服务转型？从法律场域中的角色规则和中国现有制度语境下的行为逻辑来看，法律社交网络信息交流的真实需求有限，也面临难以克服的现实障碍，很难实现社会责任和商业运营双重成功的持续发展。相对而言，在综合社交网络信息服务和垂直社交网络信息服务之间，更可行的模式是以法律信息服务为主导的法律社交网络信息服务。因而，借鉴一些成功专业社交网络信息服务的商业模式，明确基本的法律场域角色规则及法律责任，在法律网络信息服务中加强业界网络社交，才是现有环境下实现法律社交网络商业运营与社会功能双重成功的可行办法。

A Look at Legal Social Networking Media from the Perspectives of Legal Professionals and Their Current Behavioral Logic
He Yuanqiong, Guo Ye, Law Information Center of Peking University

At present, segmented social networking may become mainstream of the instant social media era and the market is eager for legal social network information services. As "promoting rule of law" is an important way to encourage political development and system reform, legal social networking information services are characterized by positive social functions. They are a hotspot in vertical social network development within the professional service industry. However, is the legal information service industry really ripe for transforming to vertical social networking information services? From the rule of law perspective and the behavior of Chinese in the current system, the real demand of legal social network information exchange is limited. Such exchange faces insurmountable obstacles, and it is difficult to achieve success in both social responsibility and business operations. Relatively speaking, between comprehensive social networking information services and vertical social network information services, the more feasible model is legal social networking information service that are dominated by legal information service providers. So in order to achieve success in both social responsibility and business operations in the current environment, it is important to learn from successful business models in other professional social networking information services, making it clear the basic role of legal rules and legal liability , and to strengthen social networking in the legal information services.

法律职业教育体系下的信息素养教育发展思考

袁 晖  上海交通大学凯原法学院图书馆

我国现行的法学教育模式注重向学生传授必要的法学原理和基本的法律知识，较少考虑对学生实际操作能力的培养和社会的实际需求，而在美国的法律职业教育体系中，信息素养教育是非常重要的环节。信息素养能力是法律职业人员应当具备的基本技能，调查表明法学专业学生的信息素养能力水平堪忧。信息素养能力不足对于法律研究、司法实践，乃至于一个国家的法制发展都会产生重大的影响，因此在学习阶段接受系统的信息素养教育具有现实必要性。为此，美国的法学教育界尝试将信息素养教育纳入“法律职业能力教育”的大框架下，引领了法学教育的新趋势，这一实践为我国的法学教育改革提供了经验。本文分析了美国法学信息素养教育的形成、发展以及实施的具体措施，包括课程设置、人员配置以及评价体系，并从教育理念的转变、授课形式的创新、专业人员的培养以及先进工具的运用等角度探索信息素养教育在我国法学职业教育体系中的发展。

The Development of Information Literacy Education in Professional Legal Education System

Yuan Ye, Koguan Law School of Shanghai Jiao Tong University

China’s current legal education model focuses on teaching students jurisprudence and basic knowledge of the law. But it rarely considers practical skills training to meet the actual needs of society. But contrast, in the United States, information literacy education plays a very important role in professional legal education. Information literacy is a critical skill for legal professionals. This investigation showed that law students’ information literacy competency is problematic. Lack of information literacy competency will have a significant impact on legal research, legal practice, as well as the development of the national legal system. Thus, information literacy education in law school has a practical necessity. Because of this, American legal education integrates information literacy education into the legal education system and serves as a model for Chinese legal education reform. This paper analyzes the formation and development of the legal information literacy education in the United States, describes specific aspects, including curriculum, staffing and evaluation, and discusses the development of information literacy education in Chinese legal institutions, including the transformation of educational concepts, innovative teaching models, training of professionals, and the use of advanced tools.

The University Library’s Knowledge Service: Based on the New Generation of Library Information Technology and Systems

Fan Jingyi, Library of University of Political Science and Law

By relying on the digital library platform and environment, utilizing the library’s information science expertise, and by acquiring, organizing and then developing relevant expertise through the analysis of user’s information needs and challenges, the University’s Library Knowledge Service can offer knowledge support and service throughout the whole process of decision-making or problem-solving. How do we implement this service? How do we improve the ability of knowledge resources mining, sorting, storage, and publishing? The key is to combine research and technical support, improve information technology and systems, and improve knowledge mining and integration. From the perspective of the University Library Knowledge Service, this article describes a university library, its knowledge discovery and access services, personalized services, storage methods, knowledge sharing capabilities, and mobile knowledge services. All of these services depend on the new generation of information technology and library systems. Knowledge service can meet users’ multi-dimensional knowledge needs and is an important means to enhance the competitiveness of the university library service. User’s knowledge service also contributes to the renewal and development of the library system.

论高校图书馆古（旧）籍文献的保护与利用

李军 西北政法大学图书馆

随着时间的推移，大学图书馆收藏的古籍文献越来越多地被认定为珍贵文物。出于对古籍文献的特殊保护要求，需要大学投入更多的经费改善收藏条件，于是产生了疑问——大学图书馆收藏和保护这些内容与本学校教学科研无关，又鲜有读者使用的古（旧）籍文献有意义吗？针对这一疑问，本文以西北政法大学图书馆为例，提出了以下关于大学图书馆古（旧）籍文献的收藏价值和开发利用的几点认识：一是大学图书馆收藏保护古（旧）籍文献是社会责任使然，是人类文明得以发展传承的需要；二是大学图书馆可以充分挖掘古（旧）籍文献的诸多价值，包括追根溯源的史料价值、文化艺术价值、学术研究价值等；三是鉴于大学经费有限，以及在保护古籍方面的经验和技术不足等原因，建议将古籍捐赠到古籍博物馆等地收藏，以利于更好地收藏和保护古籍。

The Protection and Utilization of Rare Books by University Libraries

Li Jun, Library of Northwest University of Politics and Law

An increasing number of rare works collected by university libraries have been identified as precious cultural relics, requiring significant investments to protect them. This has raised questions—since the collection and protection of rare works is not related to academic teaching and research, and few patrons use them, why should the universities assume this role? This paper uses the library of Northwest University of Politics and Law as an example to put forth some ideas on collection and utilization of rare works as follows: first, preservation, transmission and development of human civilization rely on ancient works so their protection is the social responsibility of universities. Second, ancient works are of great values to the universities so as to trace origins, improve cultural and artistic meaning, and promote academic research. Finally, when facing issues such as insufficient funding, experience and techniques in the protection of rare works, one suggestion is to donate them to museums.
A Revolution in Progress--RDA, Law Cataloging, Linked Data, and the Semantic Web

George Prager, New York University Law School Library
Hu Xiaojing, East China Normal University

This is a very exciting and momentous time with regard to development in the organization and management of information that has been formerly available only in library catalogs. A new cataloging code RDA--Resource Description & Access, was implemented by the Library of Congress on March 31, 2013. This is a revolutionary new code—a new way of organizing information, designed for the digital era, and much more international in outlook than AACR2. RDA is intended to transform cataloging metadata from static discrete records kept in library catalogs into linked data that will be accessible on the Semantic Web. Most libraries in the United States will be switching to the new code, if they have not already, in the next few months, national and many other libraries in Great Britain, Canada, Australia, and Germany, and New Zealand will also be implementing the new code. Interest has also been great in China: The National Library of China, the Library Society of China, and the Chinese Expert Group on Cataloging have been discussing the potential for implementing RDA in China.
A Research on Current Situation and Trends of Introduced Law Databases in Universities in mainland China

Dai Wei, Wells

With the rapid development of the internet, database technology and their content have been widely used, especially in the field of academic research. The world’s leading publishers have digitized their publications. With the help of the internet and advanced search engines, they spread knowledge around the world. They have made significant contributions to global knowledge sharing. Since the end of the Twentieth Century, Chinese universities have introduced a large number of legal databases. These legal databases have contributed greatly to academic law study in China.

With the increasing number of legal databases being introduced and scholars’ varied research interests, legal resource databases are increasingly used in Chinese universities. Thus, we can expect an even richer array of databases to be introduced in the future. In addition, universities are fast becoming leading international research institutes and they have more need to introduce legal databases like Taiwan, Hong Kong, Japan, the United States and other regions and countries.

This paper summarizes and compares the main legal databases in China and abroad and also compares the current status of introducing legal database in Chinese universities to Taiwan, Hong Kong, Japan and the United States. Finally, this paper explains the future trends and challenges in introducing legal databases within Chinese academia.
Library Services in the Environment of Digitization and Globalization of Legal Information: Challenges and Opportunities

Zhang Xiaomeng, University of Michigan Law Library

Looking back on the last two decades, two of the most significant milestones in the world legal history are the digitization of legal information movement and the globalization of legal services. Both have shown mixed effects on the legal information field. On the one hand, both increase the availability and accessibility of legal information to users through a wide variety of channels and platforms. On the other, the needs of legal information increase at the same time. The information overload influenced by both create new challenges and barriers for users to seek and use legal information effectively and efficiently.

This presentation focuses on how these two phenomena create opportunities as well as challenges for academic law librarians in the United States on providing reference services and building law collections from an academic legal reference and collection development librarian’s perspective. More specifically, the presentation will cover certain new trends related to law library services such as the emerging new patron/consumer needs of information services and products, the more and more diverse reference services in terms of patron base, perception, and content and format, as well as new selection tools and considerations in the collection development area. The presentation will conclude with a few suggestions on how librarians can be better prepared to respond to those trends and challenges proactively.
Cultural Property — What Is It and Why Is It Important?

Filippa Anzalone, Boston College Law School

Cultural property, or in a broad sense, cultural heritage, gives us a picture of a way of culture life at a particular time on the earth. Cultural property adds to the historical record of cultures that are sometimes under threat or gone. This session will begin with an examination of why cultural property—the (usually) tangible expression of a culture—is immeasurably valuable and essential for understanding and identity reasons. We will look at some famous examples of tangible cultural property such as: "masterpieces" and art works; archaeological artifacts and sites; sacred places and buildings; and museums, libraries, and archival collections. We will examine the various concepts of ownership of cultural property: does it belong to a particular nation or state; or does cultural property transcend borders and belong to mankind in general? We will look at the importance of preservation of cultural property. And, finally, we will discuss some of the legal frameworks that have been developed for cultural property protection.

数字图书馆在跨境隐私数据保护中的策略研究

米铁男 北京邮电大学

在图书馆数字信息化发展过程中，用户隐私数据安全问题引起了普遍的关注。包括隐私数据在内的用户个人信息已经成为一项具有战略意义的国家资源，因此各国开始致力于个人隐私数据信息的保护工作。我国当前由于个人信息保护立法缺位，监管机构缺位，行业自律效果不佳，数字图书馆在用户隐私数据的管理和传输方面存在不少安全问题。为此，应该尽快制定信息保护方面的基本法律，组建专门的隐私数据保护机构，理清行业组织的性质和职能，建立以国家立法为依据、行业规范为指引、隐私数据保护监管机构和认证机构并行的调整框架。此外，在数字图书馆内部要逐渐完善隐私政策，可以欧盟的数据传输规则为参考，形成国内标准的隐私政策声明范本。
Strategies to Protect the Privacy of Using Library Databases Located Overseas

Mi Tienan, Beijing University of Posts and Telecommunications

As libraries develop digital information, user privacy and data security issues have presented concerns. Personal information is now an important national resource, and nations have already adopted measures to protect personal information. In China, there is no national legislation to protect personal information, no regulatory body, and no effective mechanisms for industry self-regulation. Thus, there are many challenges for digital libraries in managing and transmitting user privacy data. The Chinese government should enact a basic law of information privacy as soon as possible. It should also establish regulatory bodies, and clarify the nature and function of industry organizations. China should establish a personal information protection system consisting of national legislation, code of practice, and supervisory and certification institutions. In addition, as digital libraries improve their privacy policies, they can model them after the EU rules in formulating privacy policy standards and statements.

Copyright in Libraries: 21st Century Challenges and Opportunities

James Heller, College of William & Mary Law Library

More information is available today than ever before, but the questions are “can you get it?” and “if you get it, what can you do with it?” Professor Heller will explain U.S. copyright law and how users’ rights are being challenged in the digital world, including copyright-protected materials, owner and user rights (including fair use and special exemptions for libraries), public performances, and using copyright-protected works for distance education. He also will discuss the 2012 Georgia State electronic coursepack decision, the HathiTrust/Google Books cases, licensing restrictions, and international copyright actions that affect librarians and other users of copyrighted works.
